If you're a fan of the genre, then Freddy vs. Jason is definitely one film you'll find intriguing for many reasons. From its dynamic storytelling to its suspenseful atmosphere and enough gore to keep even the most hardcore horror movie enthusiast satisfied, what's not to love? The film brings together two iconic horror characters, Freddy Krueger and Jason Voorhees, as they fight one another over the souls of the teenagers who are trapped in a small town by an angry mob falsely accusing them of being responsible for a series of killings that have been happening in their neighborhood. If you're not already familiar with the various "Freddy" and "Jason" characters, then you'll definitely want to check out this film and take a few notes before the first scary moment happens. They're both two icons of horror, created by John Carpenter and Robert Shaye respectively, who have starred in numerous movies over the years, so you know you're getting your money's worth if you watch this one! Aside from those two characters, there are other familiar ones as well. Wes Craven makes another cameo appearance as he does in pretty much all of his movies these days. Robert Englund plays himself again in this movie after playing himself in the very first Freddy vs. Jason film back in 2003. The movie was well-reviewed when it was released, but one thing that a lot of people were disappointed in is the lack of Heather Langenkamp playing Nancy Thompson in the film. The actress who played her in the "Nightmare on Elm Street" series ended up being pregnant at the time of filming or else it would have been her role instead. Instead, Rachel Harris played Nancy's part.
